@CTIVATE- project on participation of young People online

30 April –
9 May 2020

London,
U. K.

Centre of Innovative Approaches (CIA CIC) is young community interest company which was born to bring different approaches into education of young people for community development.

We try to create opportunities for individuals, communities and civil societies to their development and capacity building. We would like to enrich the educational, social and cultural life of young people both in UK and outside. We would like to offer equal opportunities to young people with fewer opportunities. Our organization is aimed towards community of youth development, because we believe that young people can play an active role in the public life and become partners in the decision-making processes, and a driving force in the shaping of the society they live in.

We would like to contribute to the formation of new successful generation, which is determined to change the world for the better in a stronger social cohesion that includes minorities and migrants.

Our Objectives are:

- to increase employment of young people and to support their personal and professional development,
- to create new creative and innovative educational tools that can be multiply,
- to create common space for people with different cultural backgrounds,
- to promote equality and integration of minorities in host communities,
- to encourage active citizenship and civic participation of young people,
- to assist in building and developing a civil society based on the principles of democracy, freedom, pluralistic and rule of law, justice, responsibility and solidarity,
- to promote sustainable development by building capacity of civil society organizations and other stakeholders.

CONTEXT

Young people have – through digital tools – more chances than ever to participate. Those chances are everywhere and in everything. Youth workers need to rethink our whole approach toward participation. The project is focused at raising competences of youth workers to activate participation of youth online and to work directly with youth empowerment in order to provide multiplication and sustainability

The objectives of the training course are:

- ❖ to increase critical thinking, internet literacy and sense of initiative of young people in order to build a safe space for participation online; -
- ❖ to develop a shared understanding of youth participation online and analyse the achievements and pitfalls of current youth participation in these processes;
- ❖ to explore what are the rights, the means, the spaces, the opportunities and the support required by young people in order to meaningfully participate in the shaping of the Internet;
- ❖ to engage young people online and develop their capacity and competences in active participation in the life of community;
- ❖ to create opportunities for participation of young people with disadvantages through the online space; - to equip youth workers with different tools and practices of involving youth to active participation online;
- ❖ to build capacities of youth organizations through sharing and exploring the tools of engaging youth to active participation in democratic life through online participation and activism.
